The target age group for these writings was originally high school age students. Although some of the stories and references may appeal mainly to this age group, the lessons to be learned fit college and young adults quite well. God's Word applies to all ages and nationalities. The only requirement is to let His Word mold you into the Christian that God intends you to be. In this scripture study we will cover five lessons based on the book of Hebrews. The version of scripture used for quotation is King James. The book of Hebrews has many lessons to be learned and we will cover five lessons taken from the wisdom of the chapters in this book. Although the main focus of this study is the book of Hebrews, we present scripture from other books when they complement the subject matter. What can you expect to gain from this study? This may be considered a cliché, but you will get out of it no more than you are willing to put in. Regular study of God's Word is a must for those who desire to grow in Christian faith. This is another vessel that can be used for that study. Although this is part of a series, it stands alone as its own study while it complements the other four in the series (Proverbs, Matthew, and John). These studies are quite similar to any scriptural readings you may participate in - some lessons are contained completely within these words while other teachings build faith and experience from book to book and study to study.

also looks deeply at the policies that could turn this fictional account into a reality. My father brought tears and laughter to our family as he related many interesting stories from the time of his childhood to his retirement from work. Inevitably much would be forgotten over time and can never be retold in the same manner. It was an innocent enquiry from my then 10 year old daughter about his childhood and my husband's encouragement that prompted Pa to write about his life for the sake of his progenies. He became a Christian in his mid-50's and as he reflected on his past, he could see God preserving him as a young orphan, molding him for a career and marriage and preparing an eternal home in heaven for him. Pa had proven with God's help, one can rise above the struggles in life and achieve social mobility. Diligence is the key to success and Pa was my inspiration.

If one seeks to understand Haudenosaunee (Six Nations) history, one must consider the history of Haudenosaunee land. For countless generations prior to European contact, land and territory informed Haudenosaunee thought and philosophy, and was a primary determinant of Haudenosaunee identity. In The Clay We Are Made Of, Susan M. Hill presents a revolutionary retelling of the history of the Grand River Haudenosaunee from their Creation Story through European contact to contemporary land claims negotiations. She incorporates Indigenous theory, Fourth world post-colonialism, and Amerindian autohistory, along with Haudenosaunee languages, oral records, and wampum strings to provide the most comprehensive account of the Haudenosaunee's relationship to their land. Hill outlines the basic principles and historical knowledge contained within four key epics passed down through Haudenosaunee cultural history. She highlights the political role of women in land negotiations and dispels their misrepresentation in the scholarly canon. She guides the reader through treaty relationships with Dutch, French, and British settler nations, including the Kaswentha/Two-Row Wampum (the precursor to all future Haudenosaunee-European treaties), the Covenant Chain, the Nanfan Treaty, and the Haldimand Proclamation, and concludes with a discussion of the
