

Court Docket 1 Tuesday January 23 2018 Cr 1 08 30 Am 16

Papers of John Marshall: Vol XII: Correspondence, Papers, and Selected Judicial Opinions, January 1831-July 1835, with Addendum, June 1783-January 1829

As of November 1, 2014, about 78,000 applications were pending before a judicial formation of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR). Although the ECtHR's docket has been reduced by nearly 50% over the last three years, this still represents a very significant number of cases to be brought before an international tribunal which continues to threaten the effectiveness of the right of petition enshrined in the Convention. The vast majority of cases (92% in 2013) will be rejected on grounds of inadmissibility. Such cases clog up the docket and obstruct the examination of more deserving cases where the admissibility requirements have been satisfied. The 2010 Interlaken Conference on the reform of the ECtHR called upon the "States Parties and the Court to ensure that comprehensive and objective information is provided to potential applicants on the Convention and the Court's case-law, in particular on the application procedures and admissibility criteria." The ECtHR's first response to the call was to prepare a guide which clearly sets out the rules and case law concerning admissibility. This third edition covers case law up to January 1, 2014, and the stricter procedural conditions for applying to the ECtHR which came into force on that date. [Subject: International Law, European Law, Human Rights Law]

This is an excerpt from the Cherokee Supreme Court docket for the years 1823 to 1834. The Cherokee Supreme Court convened annually in New Echota beginning on the second Monday in October and lasting three weeks. This excerpt is from the Tuesday November 1, 1825 session of court. Entries from this Supreme Court docket cover items ch100-ch163.

Annual Report of the Judicial Council of MichiganCalendar Supreme Court of the State of MontanaDocket Commencing January 1, 1901United States Congressional Serial SetUnited States Supreme Court BulletinBringing a Case to the European Court of Human RightsA Practical Guide on Admissibility CriteriaWolf Legal Publications

Copyright: b71acf4df85703242fdde414549719ac