PREVIEW Ditched by a fiancé. Betrayed by a friend. A desire for revenge. One life-changing weekend.  He'd broken her heart once. Would she give him a chance to break it again? "What do you want Aaron?" Farrah asked. "Why are you really here?" "What if I said I made a mistake letting you go?" "Wh—what do you mean?" Farrah stammered, not believing her ears. He did not just say that? Did he? Her heart rate picked up speed. "What if I said I realize what a big mistake it was to let you go?" her ex-fiance, who was scheduled to be married in two days, said. Aaron walked over to the bed and sat beside Farrah. He took one of her hands in his. "This doesn't make any sense," Farrah said, almost to herself. His declaration totally threw her off balance. It was the last thing she expected. The very last. She looked at her hand in his. His touch. She'd dreamed about this for months. And her dream was miraculously coming true, but ... Was her stand-in lover determined to become a more permanent fixture? The Irishman Their mating had been vicious, savage, barbaric ... and beautiful. And Farrah wanted more of him. So much more. She hadn't been consumed by this kind of desire since – since forever. Even Aaron, the man she'd loved for almost a decade, had never come close to making her do some of the things she'd done last night with this perfect stranger. He was wickedly beautiful. Sinfully sexy. Rakishly seductive. Soulfully encompassing. And all of this made him the perfect stand-in lover; the perfect man to show up with to her ex-fiance's wedding. Aaron would be able to smell another man's scent on her. She knew he would because the kind of mind-blowing coupling she'd experienced last night didn't stay confined to the bedroom. It seeped out of your pores and brought a stupid grin to your face for the world to see, smell, crave, and wonder about.  Her living room wall served as a bed. He pushed her up against it, lifted her off her feet and slammed himself home one last time – all without breaking the kiss that had ignited it all. Farrah release was so hard that her legs, which were wrapped tightly around his waist, fell limp against him. Finn grabbed a fistful of her hair and pulled her head to the side. He whispered in her ear, "He was a fool to let you go." He zipped his jeans, planted a hard kiss on her lips and left her standing there, practically naked as he closed the door softly behind him. Farrah dropped to her knees and sobbed. The handsome Irishman left her body satiated, and her soul ripped to shreds.  How could a perfect stranger recognize her value, and Aaron, the man she'd given everything to for years, discard her without even so much as a goodbye? God she hated him. And he would pay. Or, was the all-knowing Irishman right when he said she wanted her ex back? "There's a thin line between love and hate, Farrah Jane," he said, moving his hand up to encircle her waist. It didn't help that he was helping her blur that line so wickedly.

GUYS TO PURSUE YOU You can do this even if you're not tall, rich or handsome. By using the concept of "Demonstrating Value," you can literally get the hottest guy in the room to pursue YOU. All you have to do is understand a few fundamentals about human nature and apply them. It's fun, easy to learn, and it WORKS. P. 41-54. Step 4: SAY SOMETHING CLEVER What can you say to somebody that won't sound like a cheesy pick up line or an awkward, try-hard attempt to sound cool? Learn the 7 biggest mistakes most gay guys make when trying to start a conversation (and how to avoid them). Try my long list of irresistible, no-rejection openers. They'll capture the imagination, stir curiosity and set the stage for a real connection. Use them TONIGHT. They're all on P. 55-75. Step 5: CREATE A POWERFUL FIRST IMPRESSION Learn how to give a guy that same feeling of "I have to have him" that he gets when he sees a guy who is rich, famous, or good looking... without being any of those things yourself. There are 5 things you can do in the crucial first 10 minutes with a man that instantly lets him know you're "in his league." How to do it? It'll all on P. 31-36. Step 6: MAKE YOURSELF MORE APPEALING Learn how to start a conversation with a good-looking guy who doesn't look interested. I'll show you the best way to disarm guys who think you may be hitting on them so they'll relax enough to have a conversation (and give you a chance to charm them). It's all on P. 37-40. Step 7: BUILD ATTRACTION Discover the most powerful approaches to getting him interested in you. They're GUARANTEED to make him look at you and think, "Tonight just got more interesting.” They’re fun to do, they put a smile on his face and best of all, they’ve been field tested in gay bars, parties and social events. These gay tips are all on P. 76-82. Step 8: KEEP IT EXCITING! I’ll show you how to prevent ‘conversation stalling’ and awkward silences by using something called “Multiple Threads.” By talking in a way that creates mild suspense, you’ll create energy, rapport and the feeling that you have a lot to talk about. You’ll never run out of things to say again! P. 83-84. Step 9: CREATE SEXUAL TENSION Strategic touching builds comfort and creates desire. Start out with indirect touching and escalate slowly with these time-tested tactics. Find out how to position yourself for no-threat touches, where to touch and how to use the “Prize Theory” to get him to touch YOU. Pretty soon you’ll need to read my gay sex advice series! All on P. 85-90.

They were average. They were in the middle. They were nothing fancy. You might even say they were ordinary. They were a group of kids who suffered from the abuses from the popular and the rough crowd when they were younger. Now older and in high school, these average kids now carry that pain suffered in their younger days around with them when they do the things they do. And the things they do are fun and give them a spice of life they need in their small Indiana town. Creeping around at night, soaping, TPing, and causing mischief are what they love to do and most of them have accepted the idea that it 's perfectly okay and really isn t hurting anyone. That is until the night before their graduation when they all must answer the question, When is enough really enough Bianca Madison doesn't put a lot of stock in the theory that some people have special gifts to see with the mind's eye. Yet when she begins having dreams about murdered women, she has to reconsider. What begins as a quest into her own sanity quickly becomes a question of her own innocence. In The Prince of Tennessee, David Maraniss and Ellen Nakashima explore in rich detail the forces that have shaped Al Gore's life, and the ways that his past offers clues to what kind of president he would be. The Gore who comes to life in these pages is an intelligent and competent man, struggling with self-doubt and insecurity that explain his bureaucratic obsession with fact and his tendency to exaggerate his accomplishments. Gore's path to power, at first glance, seems straight and narrow. While Bill Clinton's rise is a story of obstacles overcome, Gore's ascendance seems the opposite: the son of political aristocracy reared by loving and demanding parents who groomed him as a princeling to reach the top. But his life was shaped by as much duality as Clinton's. As a child Gore was shuffled back and forth from political Washington to rural Tennessee, his ancestral homeland. The contrast reflects a larger tension between what others expected of Gore and what he wanted to do. Here was the quintessential good son whom his classmates teased as the wooden Apollo. He would occasionally try to rebel but inevitably be yanked back by the burden of expectations and his own insecurity. His first ambition was to be a novelist, but his friends at Harvard saw him as a royal figure for whom a political career was unavoidable. He opposed the war in Vietnam, yet enlisted in the army anyway, out of an obligation to shield his father, the antiwar senator. When he eventually turned to politics

Gore brought with him competing impulses: the cautious political moderate with an occasional tendency toward uncommon boldness, the awkward public figure who in private can be a raucous storyteller, the loyal son and vice president who wants to be considered on his own terms, the reluctant politician who burns with a desire to fulfill his parents' dream and become president.

Every single person I know asks, 'How can I meet her/him?'

Pre-school teacher, Grace Lim, thinks that she has finally found her man at age 27. Mr-Blind-Date-No.-7, Mike, has turned out to be everything that she's ever wanted, dreamt about, and more! With a marriage proposal in hand, Grace thinks that she's set for life. Trouble begins to stir in paradise when Mike informs Grace that he is re-locating from Manila to sunny Singapore because of work. But the conveniences of modern technology aren't enough to bridge the distance between Mike and Grace; and what of Mike's colleague Kaela who appears in every photo that Mike's uploaded online? So Grace decides to give Mike a surprise visit in Singapore—but is she ready for what she will find?

Alek Novak didn't expect to find his personal chef even more intoxicating than her food. Nora is entirely wrong for him, but he can't seem to keep his distance. A funny, opposites-attract romance. She's a chef who doesn't cook... All the trouble started when Nora agreed to anonymously cater a fundraiser. She gave up cooking when her husband died and she had to sell their restaurant to pay the medical bills and return to Magnolia Valley. But when her friend asked her for a favor, she reluctantly agreed on the condition she remained anonymous. And
