Imagine a business where you could sell whatever you wanted without having to handle the product physically and being able to charge whatever price you wanted to charge on it. This is essentially what dropshipping amounts to. It is a wonderful business model; you're going to learn all about it inside and out in this chapter. There are some disadvantages as well that would be remiss of me not to remind you of. I'll cover those as well since it is unrealistic for you to assume that everything will always be hunky-dory. Either way, let's jump in and look at what dropshipping is. Dropshipping is the process where a middleman retails a manufacturer's or wholesaler's product. The middleman, in this case, is you, the store owner. The store owner takes care of all of the marketing aspects and drives traffic to the order pages, and the wholesaler takes care of product fulfillment, such as delivery and packaging. In some cases, you can even have the manufacturer brand the product with your own name and have them ship it to your customers. This business model is of immense help to the manufacturer and wholesaler since they get to focus on investing in what they know best, which is manufacturing the product. You get to focus on what you know best, which is to drive traffic and bring in sales. In effect, you're a one-person marketing team for the wholesaler's products. What's not to like? The customer will order the product via your website or sales channel and will pay you money. In turn, you pay the wholesaler at their quoted price, and you pocket the profits. The great thing about this business model is that it reduces inessential costs for all parties involved. Your startup costs are significantly lower than traditional retailers'. This doesn't mean you can start for free. As I'll explain later, it is in your best interest not to do so. However, you get to skip all of those painful inventory and purchasing costs. In essence, you get to run your business on a consignment basis from the wholesaler, which is to say that you pay only when you receive an order from a customer.

Dropshipping, or a direct delivery agreement, is one of the business models, the essence of which is that the intermediary does not have stocks of goods in the warehouse, but buys them from the manufacturer when he receives an order for it and payment from the buyer. Or he transfers the order to the wholesaler, and then he sends it himself, charging you a commission. Thus, dropshipping free the entrepreneur from the need to solve a number of issues, such as inventory, logistics and the like, allowing him to focus on marketing, promotion and, in general, actively work to increase sales. No wonder dropshipping has become especially popular precisely in the field of electronic commerce and in other areas of online sales. It gives you the opportunity to start a business with minimal start-up capital, requires less expense in the process of work, is easy to scale and allows you to offer potential buyers a wide range of product assortment. What is Dropshipping? Drop shipping simply refers to a retail fulfillment model where you do not stock the products you are selling. Instead of physically stocking the products you want to sell, you just display the items online (on your website mostly). Once a buyer places an order, you forward the order to the vendor who then acts as a third party and fulfills the orders on your behalf. From the above explanation, it is clear that the dropshipping business model usually depends of the participation of three parties namely: Supplier The first in the chain is the dropshipping supplier who fulfills the orders placed by a customer. For instance, if you are selling shirts by H&M and a customer places an order for a shirt, you will send the order details to H&M and it, being the supplier, will fulfill the order. Retailer The retailer is the person/organization that acts as an intermediary who takes orders from the customer and forwards them to the supplier who then fulfills them. This order taking process can be through a website or a social media account. Customer The customer is the person who places the order through the website or social media account. Now that you know the parties involved in the dropshipping business model, let us examine a tad bit more on how the dropshipping model works. tag: drop shipping business, dropshipping 2018, dropshipping book, dropshipping made easy, dropshipping make money online, ecommerce development, dropshipping suppliers, dropshipping ebay, dropshipping guide, dropshipping items, dropshipping amazon, dropshipping for beginners, dropshipping shopify, dropshipping on ebay, dropship online, dropship guide, make money dropshipping
