General George Armstrong Custer and his wife, Libbie Custer, were wholehearted dog lovers. At the time of his death at Little Bighorn, they owned a rollicking pack of 40 hunting dogs, including Scottish Deerhounds, Russian Wolfhounds, Greyhounds and Foxhounds. Told from a dog owner's perspective, this biography covers their first dogs during the Civil War and in Texas; hunting on the Kansas and Dakota frontiers; entertaining tourist buffalo hunters, including a Russian Archduke, English aristocrats and P. T. Barnum (all of whom presented the general with hounds); Custer's attack on the Washita village (when he was accused of strangling his own dogs); and the 7th Cavalry's march to Little Bighorn with an analysis of rumors about a Last Stand dog. The Custers' pack was re-homed after his death in the first national dog rescue effort. Well illustrated, the book includes an appendix giving depictions of the Custers' dogs in art, literature and film.

What do fearful, reactive, over-excited, and/or aggressive dogs all have in common? They all have low stress and frustration tolerance. As dogs become more confined to yards, houses, and leashes and their worlds become smaller and smaller, so do their stress and frustration tolerances. Throughout the years of domestication, we've asked more and more from our canine companions. However, we have often neglected the training that needs to come along that domestication and asking dogs to live alongside us. Many dogs have not been taught self-soothing and self-coping mechanisms. A large reason why dog trainers everywhere are seeing shockingly high numbers of reactive, anxious, fearful, and aggressive dogs in recent years. In this brief, no fluff and directly to the point, solution-oriented, easy to follow, and easier to understand book, professional dog trainer and canine educator Natalie Dobkins, walks you through how to teach your dog how to have better self-soothing and self-coping mechanisms. Not only does she teach you how to elevate your dog's stress and frustration tolerance in order to help your dog overcome anxiety, reactivity, over-excitement, and aggression but she tells you why it's important. She also includes several pages of worksheet trackers so you can track your progress as you work through the book! Natalie was the first dog trainer to popularize the term "Tethered Decompression" and brought about a new wave of dog trainers that focused on pattern training this behavior. As Natalie says, "Dog training is a journey, not a destination" so come along on this journey to becoming the dog trainer for your own dog! A more fun, healthy and rewarding relationship with your dog is only a page turn away.
