Indian Media in a Globalised World SAGE Publications India
Guji Guji is not a crocodile, nor a duck, but a crocodile duck!

A story that embodies love, tolerance, and self-identity. A crocodile egg that accidentally hits and rolls into a duck's nest, under the care of the duck mother, successfully hatches the baby crocodile Guji Guji. Although its appearance is very different from that of the duckling, my mother still treats it with the same affection as other brothers and sisters. Until Guji Guji meets three crocodiles with bad intentions, it falls into a series of inner struggles of resistance, depression, and self-doubt... The love and tolerance of the duck family for Guji Guji has long transcended race.

This book explores the transformation of Indian media in the context of two major developments: globalisation (which Sociologist Anthony Giddens terms as being 'revolutionary') and advances in communication technologies. It is rich in empirical details of how the Indian media has evolved in the past two decades, particularly in the context of potential to transform, construct and nurture particular identities in response to globalisation. The study of the transformation of Indian media is significant because not only has globalisation allowed access to a host of things hitherto represented as 'foreign' to Indian culture by the media, but it has also opened the floodgates for foreign media. Adopting a multi-disciplinary approach, this book looks at the role of media in purveying political, economic and cultural identities, the
