This book is a testimony of my journey of faith. You will find some amazing testimonies of how I fully turned to Jesus and how the Holy Spirit had intervened in my life. Through my pain and trials, I learned to trust in the Lord who had unceasingly manifested his love toward me. Every time I go astray, Jesus always brings me back to him. He has always stretched his arms to catch me from falling in a pitfall. Above all, I learned that our Lord will never try us more than we could handle. This book is the first part of all Jesus has done for me in this life. Please read it with an open mind and with your spiritual eyes. To God be all the glory! My name is Lea Constance Agnero Powell. I was born on October 5th, 1968, in a beautiful west-african and french-speaking country called Cote d'Ivoire (Ivory Coast). I came in the US in June 17th, 1993 as a camp counselor. I attended EPP Labat in Abidjan from 6 years old to 12 years old. I attended the all-girl and prestigious school, Lycée Sainte Marie in Abidjan Cocody where I was on honor roll and obtained my High school diploma. I also obtained my first bachelor's degree

I obtained a bachelor's degree from Johnson and Wales University in Information Technology (Providence, RI) and my master's degree from Pfeiffer University (Charlotte, NC). I work as a Business Analyst in Charlotte, North Carolina. I have two beautiful kids, Henrick and Shepherd. I enjoy reading, traveling, shopping, and cooking. I am very motivated to achieve great things in this life.

Assessing three of the most enduring civilian regimes in Africa--Botswana, Kenya, and, until the December 1999 coup, the Ivory Coast--Boubacar N'Diaye focuses on the role of civilian regimes in the institutionalization of civilian control. The author warns that only government legitimacy and a culture of genuine military professionalism are likely to assure civilian control of the military. N'Diaye calls for a bold conceptual shift in the study of African civil-military relations away from expedient short-term coup avoidance. Refreshingly, his study emphasizes the policies regimes enact instead of the structures of African societies or the personal idiosyncrasies of leaders. This book has important implications not only for understanding the causes and outcomes of coups in Africa, but also for the study of emerging democracies everywhere.

Describes a youngster's adventures travelling in the Ivory Coast and Central Africa in the early 1800's.

This paper evaluates the economic performance of the cattle and meat marketing system in Ivory Coast, based on 18 months of field research. The paper discusses recent changes in Ivory Coast's pattern of meat supply, the current organization of the cattle and meat trades, the need for improved market infrastructure, and the problems and costs of transporting cattle and meat to and within Ivory Coast. It also discusses determinants of the most profitable location for slaughter, and what the current patterns of cattle and meat prices imply for the financial viability of proposed cattle fattening projects. The paper concludes with a set of policy recommendations. The marketing system was found to be rather efficient given the infrastructure and institutional framework within which it operates. Major improvements in market performance, however, could result from upgrading livestock transportation and market infrastructure and from changing some of the rules under which the cattle and meat trades operate. A comedy drama about a wealthy African man. It is the story of a young, wise-cracking, black businessman living in London. Upon the death of his mother, he travels to Africa to find his father, but while there, discovers far more about himself.

Excerpt: Abidjan is the economic and former official capital of Ivory Coast, while the current capital is Yamoussoukro. As of 2011 it was the largest city in the nation and the third-largest French-speaking city in the world, after Paris and Kinshasa, but before Montreal. It has, according to the authorities of the country in 2006, 5,068,858 residents in the metropolitan area and 3,796,677 residents in the municipality. Only Lagos, the former capital of Nigeria, has a larger number of inhabitants in this region. Considered a cultural hub of West Africa, Abidjan is characterized by a high level of industrialization and urbanization. The city stands in Ebrie Lagoon, on several converging peninsulas and islands, connected by bridges. The city grew after the construction of a new wharf in 1931 and its designation as the capital of the then French colony in 1933. The completion of the Vridi Canal in 1951 enabled it to...

Having once been a byword for instability, Ivory Coast has well and truly re-opened to the world. The country is a stunner, from the cream-hued beaches of Assinie to the crimson savannahs of the north and a wealth of wildlife-rich national parks. And its culture is as fascinating as its nature : adherents of the world's major religions still consult féticheurs, the music scene spans everything from revolutionary coupé-decalé to freeform jazz, and even the lowliest maquis serves up a delicious fusion of french haute cuisine and uniquely African spices. In this, the first standalone guide to the country in English, Tom Sykes guides you expertly from the skyscrapers of Abidjan to the crocodile pools of Yamoussoukro, dispensing invaluable background and practical information along the way.
