The kilns at Morgantina, site of the well-known excavations in central Sicily, are an outstanding example of multiple potters' workshops in use during the late Hellenistic period. In fully documenting these ten kilns, excavated between 1955 and 1963, Ninina Cuomo di Caprio offers both a representative cross-section of the physical setting of ceramic production in this ancient Greek city and evidence for its daily industrial activity. She includes detailed plans and section drawings of each kiln and formulates hypotheses on its operation in light of modern thermodynamics. The text, which is in Italian, is preceded by an English-language summary. Cuomo di Caprio's archaeological study of the kiln structures and their ceramic products is supplemented by such diagnostic tools as thermoluminescence analysis, neutron activation analysis, X-ray diffraction, and optical examination by polarizing microscope. Opening an entirely new window into the everyday working practices of the Morgantina potters, this study demonstrates that they operated at a very sophisticated level: selecting and purifying specific clays, and adding certain materials to manipulate their working and firing characteristics. Nel 1959 il Liverpool Football Club era da anni nella seconda divisione del campionato inglese. Il Liverpool Football Club non aveva mai vinto la Coppa d'Inghilterra. Quindici stagioni più tardi il Liverpool Football Club era tornato in prima divisione, aveva vinto tre campionati, due Coppe d'Inghilterra, la Coppa Uefa e si era imposto come una delle squadre più forti d'Europa. Artefice di questo successo, l'uomo destinato a diventare una figura leggendaria dello sport: Bill Shankly. Per Shankly il calcio era sempre stato una missione, uno scopo di vita, il mezzo per trasformare i giocatori e i tifosi, per ricambiare la loro fiducia. La sua unica ambizione, portare la sua squadra alla vittoria: in Inghilterra, in Europa, ovunque. Nel 1974, il Liverpool Football Club e il suo allenatore sono pronti a raccogliere nuovi successi. Ma con una decisione sorprendente, Bill Shankly dà le dimissioni, una scelta che sconvolge giocatori e tifosi e che segnerà il resto della sua vita. Partita dopo partita, allenamento dopo allenamento, David Peace canta l'ascesa del Liverpool Football Club e di Bill Shankly. Canta l'ossessione totalizzante di un uomo per il calcio, il suo desiderio di vittoria e il suo amore per la squadra e i suoi sostenitori. Giorno dopo giorno, notte dopo notte, David Peace canta il ritiro di Bill Shankly, i dubbi e i rimpianti di un uomo che vorrebbe ricominciare tutto da capo. Canta Shankly che si aggira per Liverpool come un re decaduto, riverito dai tifosi, ma osteggiato dallo stesso club che ha portato al trionfo. Dopo Il maledetto United, David Peace torna al mondo del calcio e sbalordisce ancora una volta il lettore con la sua scrittura incisiva, in grado di trasformare le vicende individuali in narrazioni epiche e universali. Red or Dead non è solo il romanzo di un uomo, di una squadra e della loro città: è il racconto duro e commosso dell'epoca d'oro del calcio inglese e del suo inevitabile declino. La conferma di uno dei massimi autori contemporanei. The 1998 soccer World Cup was perhaps the greatest international event in recent French history. This collection examines the effects on the host nation of the major economic, political, cultural and sporting dimensions of this global sports event. It discusses issues such as the impact on traditional French approaches to sport of the commercialisation of football, the improvement of sporting infrastructures, the marketing of the competition, the role of commercial sponsors, media coverage of the matches, policing and security during the month-long competition, and the French nation's identification with the multiracial national team.

This book brings in the focus on the borders between different contexts that need to be crossed, in the process of education. Despite the considerable efforts of various groups of researchers all over the World, it does not seem that traditional educational psychology has succeeded in illuminating the complex issues involved in the schoolfamily relationship. From a methodological perspective, there is no satisfactory explanation of the connection between representations and actual practice in educational contexts. Crossing Boundaries is an invitation to cultural psychology of educational processes to overcome the limits of existing educational psychology. Eemphasizing social locomotion and the dynamic processes, the book try to capture the ambiguous richness of the transit from one context to another, of the symbolic perspective that accompanies the dialogue between family and school, of practices regulating the interstitial space between these different social systems. How family and school fill, occupy, circulate, avoid or strategically use this space in between? What discourses and practices saturate this Border Zone and/or cross from one side to the other? Crossing Boundaries gathers contributions with the clear aim of documenting and analysing what happens at points of contact between family culture and scholastic/educational culture from the perspective of everyday life. This book is in itself an attempt to cross the border between the "theorizing on the borders" (and how "the outside world" and "the others" are perceived from a certain point of view) and "the practices" that characterize the school-home interaction.

In "The Idea of Sport in Western Culture from Antiquity to the Contemporary Era," Dr Saverio Battente examines the concept of sport as an element of Western culture. Sport has aided in structuring the collective identities that underpin individual civilisations in the West, and, far from being a merely marginal phenomenon, it has in fact been an essential feature of Western civilisation and culture from antiquity, in its various forms. The starting point of the book is the idea that there is a certain number of universal traits—unchanged across time and different cultures—underlying all sports, even if there are a series of entirely original elements with which sport has been linked over the centuries in specific civilizations. This volume thus makes a comparative analysis of the ancient, modern, and contemporary worlds and various national contexts; longues durées (whose presence transcends anthropological and cultural barriers), divergences, and discontinuities pertaining to the concept of sport are identified and explored. The book also looks at the link between the rise of civilisation and the educational and training function of sport, as well as the connection between a culture's decline and a growing emphasis on sport as an element of entertainment and spectacle in and of itself.

This Handbook offers an analysis of the relation between football and politics, based on over 30 case studies covering five continents. It provides a detailed picture of this relation in a wide number of European, American, African, and Asian states, as well as a comparative assessment of football in a global perspective, thus combining the general and the local. It examines themes such as the political origins of football in the studied country, the historical club rivalries, the political aspects of football as a sports spectacle, and the contemporary issues linked to the political use of football. By following the same structure with each study, the volume allows for the comparison between largely investigated cases and cases that have seldom been addressed. The Handbook will be of use particularly to students and scholars in the fields of sport studies, political science and sociology, as well as cultural studies, anthropology and leisure studies.

Embracing studies of football fans across Europe, this book tackles questions of power, national and regional identities, and race and racism, highlighting the changing role of fans in the game. The contributors, all leading figures in sports studies, consider:

- * whether football remains the peoples game, or if it is now run entirely by and for club owners and directors who have overseen the flotation of clubs on the stock exchange, a new focus on merchandising and the escalation of players salaries
- * the role of FIFA and UEFA in the struggle for control of world football
- * manifestations of racism and extreme nationalism in football, from the English medias xenophobic coverage of Euro 96 to the demonisation of Eric Cantona
- * media representations of national identity in football coverage in Germany, France and Spain
- * the interplay of national, religious and club identities among fans in England, Scotland, Ireland, Portugal and Scandinavia
- * the role of the law in regulating football
- * the future for supporters at a time when watching the match is more likely to mean turning on the television than going to a football ground.
