Athletes constantly strive to achieve high standards in their chosen sport to improve, and compete with the best! Motivated to achieve excellence, inspired managers approach the rapidly changing world of business in a similar fashion. This second Pacific Rim edition of Richard Daft's widely acclaimed management text, as adapted by Danny Samson, brings the challenges of management to life. Written for those studying management for the first time, Management provides hundreds of real-world business examples. In the process, it connects the theory of management with current best practice in successful companies, large and small, and shows what influences and guides managerial action in today's organisations.

In business, as in other aspects of life, we learn and grow from the examples set by others. Imitation can lead to innovation. But in order to grow innovatively, how do businesses decide what firms to imitate? And how do they choose what practices to follow? Learning by Example takes an unprecedented look at the benchmarking initiative of a major financial institution. David Strang closely follows twenty-one teams of managers sent out to observe the practices of other companies in order to develop recommendations for change in their own organization. Through extensive interviews, surveys, and archival materials, Strang reveals that benchmarking promotes a distinctive managerial regime with potential benefits and pitfalls. He explores the organizations treated as models of best practice, the networks that surround a bank and form its reference group, the ways managers craft calls for change, and the programs implemented in the wake of vicarious learning. Strang finds that imitation does not occur through mindless conformity. Instead, managers act creatively, combining what they see in external site visits with their bank's strategic objectives, interpreted in light of their understanding of rational and progressive management. Learning by Example opens the black box of interorganizational diffusion to show how managers interpret, advocate, and implement innovations.

authors present and interpret organizational behaviour theory and research so that students can comprehend the three characteristics common to all organizations - behaviour, structure and processes - as affected by actions of managers. The text is easily adaptable to these individual preferences.
