In its 114th year, Billboard remains the world's premier weekly music publication and a diverse digital, events, brand, content and data licensing platform. Rajendra Shekhar, former CBI director and former DG police Rajasthan, has strung together episodes that are astoundingly gripping. He has studied in two of the most prestigious educational power houses of the country, Mayo (schooling) and St. Stephen's (college education). He has authored two books in English and one in Hindi; all of them having won acclaim. His rich professional experience (in state police and the CBI) is evidenced in his experiences during the 1965 Indo-Pak War and in his supervision of cases of special crime, anti-corruption and murder in the CBI. His skilled narration in Facebook posts and penned articles has drawn exceptional endorsements. The book is peppered with endearing characters that flit through the pages perpetrating well-meaning indiscretions from Mansukha to Masoom and of course Amma (author's mother) who is naive enough to think that Eton is just a pile of bricks. Shekhar's forte is character delineation. As such, the unique aspect of this book is that it is replete with delightful characters having a bearing on human interest. This touching tale of times gone by will strike a heart-warming chord with its readers, as they go along to discover the humane facet of a 'uniformed service', otherwise known for its severe approach.

A sequel to Thanks for the Memory, which contains some 200 black and white images together with a dozen colour images. This book aims to present the reader with glimpses of the steam age on BR.

Memories are Made of this What it was Like to Grow Up in the Fifties James Lorimer & Company

"Burdened with the guilt of having to initiate this dirty thing called sex, and having it on their minds all the time, the boys, in their role of sexual predator, dressed like crooks: greasy bogie cuts, zoot-suit pants and pointy black shoes.... They looked evil, because sex was evil, and evil was sexy." Melinda McCracken's account of growing up in Winnipeg in the 1950s is a vivid portrait of this paradoxical period of licence and repression. She recounts the joys and frustrations of being a teenager in the wake of World War Two: the role of parents, of church, of school, and of peers in shaping a distinctive teenage culture. She presents this culture in remarkable detail, remembering the minutest social rituals, the peculiarities of fashion and style, the norms of social life and the baroque rules surrounding sexuality at this time. Memories are made of this offers a vital glimpse into the fascinating youth culture of 1950s Canada.

over twenty years, and on whom the characters of Harry and Sarah are based. It was whilst I was on holiday on the Isle of Wight , fifteen years after his death, that I had a vision of Bob near an old derelicted house. This inspired me to write 'Memories are made of Love'. It is really two love stories in one. With special thanks to Anne-Marie Hunt for all her help. Also to my three sons Chris, Martyn and Ady who taught me how to use a computer. Many thanks to Josh Heydon for his valuable assistance and to my friend Mary Murray who proof read for me and afforded some very constructive criticism. I really couldn't have done it without you all.

Denise Hunt has no memory of her past, apart from the odd sensation of being married and having a daughter, but she can't be sure. When social media company Memex start charging scandalous subscription charges for their service, she has to choose between her addiction to cigarettes, drugs and alcohol or getting a Memex subscription. When she can't afford to pay, she is forced to step out into a world that is difficult for her to navigate and has changed beyond recognition. Meanwhile, her ex-husband, Dean, top coder for Memex, is trying desperately to keep a lid on his memories being shared to the network as he works on a server upgrade, while her daughter, Angela, keeps experiencing memory flickers of her mother, which could tear her happy life and family apart.

Memories Are Made of This spans five generations of family history and memorable stories. Packed with rich anecdotes and never before published information, 'Memories Are Made of This' is an intimate biography of a rediscovered star who represents an era. Memory is what defines who we are and who others are in our minds. Memory shapes our moral and intellectual personality, and the way we think and behave. Indeed, it would be impossible to live as one person, with an individual history or consciousness, without the memory threads that constantly link our present to our past and future. But why are memories so complex and mysterious? In every instant we are remembering something, but how are memories formed? And why, if remembering is so ordinary, do our memories fail so often? What is happening in the brain when we recall a face, reconstruct the image of a place, or struggle to find an answer that we think we know? Does storage imply that memories are fixed in particular chunks of brain tissue, or is it a dynamic, biologically creative process that involves many different parts of the brain? How long do different memories last? What do genes have to do with memory? And, finally, are we the only creatures that remember and forget, and, if not, are there commonalties in the memories of different species?
