Citizens of The Bahamas, we have many questions to answer, not only about economic growth and sustenance but about the moral and social dilemma in which we find ourselves. Our country is in a crisis, entangled in a morass of immense crime, violence, and moral and spiritual decadence. How much longer can we survive on this path? How should nations spiraling out of control be governed? What is our role as citizens in reconstructing our nation? How to Reconstruct a Nation takes an in-depth look at the political dynamics in The Bahamas.

Included are reform ideas in the context of democracy, thoughts, experiences, and divine revelations. This combination provides thought-provoking and inspiring information on how to promote institutional integrity and the establishment of moral authority for national leadership. All in our beloved country must face the reality before us. No longer can we be engrossed in partisan politics and blindly follow the ill-focused and ineffective agendas of political leaders. "Government is for the people, and by the people." Therefore, we the people must make the call for constitutional reform, integrity, and righteous leadership to take our country forward. - How should the people respond to institutions of leadership? - What is the role of the church in influencing the governing process and public policy in our society? - Is there a case for higher ethics and morality in politics? - Legitimacy and moral authority - The components of accountable governance

In Keys for Living Single, Dr. Munroe describes how singleness—as we define it—is a myth. He explains the true nature of singleness and how it enables us to become everything God designed us to be: "If a state of singleness means 'to be unique and whole,' then to be totally single should be every Christian's number one goal." Develop a wholeness and completeness that will define and guide you for the rest of your life as you fulfill your singular purpose in the world—single or married.

Today, too many men are becoming sideline players in their position as fathers. How does the family survive without the authority and structure of fathers? Today, the reality of family leadership is at best a cliché or a sign of things to come. Where the family goes, so goes society. Where are we headed as a nation? What guidance have we provided for our children, and their children? Our schools have become the battlefield for the enemy; and our homes have become battlegrounds where the enemy has setup shop. The home, like heaven, should be an expression of God's love and structure. A place of serenity and refuge; the home should not be the stomping ground for divorce, abuse, or a place where leadership is absent or thwarts the very fruit of God's love. In order to rekindle a nation with a vision for God, fathers will have to turn their focus toward their children by first becoming leaders in the home.

Our emotions influence our responses and subsequent reactions to change or to life's experiences. For a lot of us, our formal and informal education systems did not provide the skills to navigate the changes and challenges we encounter in life. The good thing, though, is that we can still learn it along the way, at whatever stage we are in life. I experienced this kind of learning on the Nile River--rafting without prior knowledge but with willingness to learn, change the status quo, practice, become better, and be flexible enough to let adventure in. I was a mediocre paddler, and I didn't know how to swim--but I was willing to learn. It is out of that adventure that I am able to reflect on the metaphor of a river as our daily life. The key lessons I took from the river raft that I have seen as key in learning and applying emotional intelligence in our lives for overall success are: Know your course. Stay present. Don't give power to external conditions. Adapt purposely. Have some tools and options. Team with people who are creating the results that you want. Don't flow back on yourself: Get out of obstructions as soon as possible--your whole life still awaits you! Recharge. Flow on purpose and live. Celebrate the unsung hero inside you.
