This book is concerned with the pleading and proof of foreign law in English courts. Fentiman argues that the law is both more complex and more defensible than had previously been supposed. By providing a practical guide to the subject, he presents the conflict of laws in a way which is both novel and illuminating.

Excerpt from Precedents in Pleading: Being Forms Filed of Record in the Supreme Court of the Colony of Cape of Good Hope I 01mm this collection of Cape Colonial Pleadings, which was gathered by me while I had the honour of still practising at the Cape Bar, and which a short respite from my present judicial duties now gives me the opportunity of putting into form for the press. I hope that these pleadings may not only be found useful within the walls where they were first read by the distinguished ex-pleaders whose names they bear, but that they may find further favour in all the Law Courts of South Africa (in some of which I know such forms are much desired), and thus ultimately conduce to uniformity of Colonial Legal Procedure. To the Circuit Practitioner, who has to draw pleadings under circumstances often of unusual hurry and difficulty, I trust this collection of Precedents may prove.
