Book Description: Eclectic Madness is a well written book of poems that transcends the boundaries of human emotions. You'll laugh, you'll cry. You'll sympathise. You'll be wrapped in romance. You'll also ask, where has this book been all my life? This is a book for all times and all seasons. Author's Bio: Jamaican born Janice Maud is an established romance writer, and a member of the International Society Of Poets. She has always had a passion for poetry. Her love for education and children drew her to write many of the poems in this book. Her passion for peace, charity and equality for women is told in the pages of this book.

Rumi is best known for his poems expressing the ecstasies and mysteries of love in all its expressions divine, erotic, and, friendship. In Love: What Is Life Without It, we have collected 30 of his best-loved poems of romantic love. The poems range from the feeling of being "complete" that one experiences with a soul mate, to the madness of sudden love, to the shifting of a relationship from romance to deep friendship. The poems cover all "the magnificent regions of the heart." Like Rumi himself, his words are beautiful and accessible, and capable of transporting the reader straight into the world of soul. His poetry is highly uplifting and offers a glimmer of hope; they are as powerful today as they were on their creation more than 700 years ago.

Love and Madness is a collection of love poems written during the hardest years of my life. Happiness, sadness, insanity, and peace are the moments that are the most significant parts of love and life. Experiencing these moments, no matter how temporary they were, made the painful moments of my life easier to bear.

Daniel Eagles is a poet who writes mostly in a free verse, unrhyming style, sporadically throughout his simple, daily life. From the subtle truths of love, death and freedom, to the depths of madness and melancholy, his poems convey the beautiful simplicity and raw emptiness of a human life. This book is the first poetry collection to be released by Daniel Eagles.

An English translation from Urdu of selected poems from Darshan Singh's magnum opus, Mataa'-e Noor. Winner of prestigious literary awards in India, this fine contemporary mystical poetry also serves as a basis for instruction in the Sant Mat spiritual tradition in India and throughout the world. Hundreds of verses celebrate the torments and ecstasies that the lover of God suffers at the hands of the Divine. Also included are an introduction to the poet's life and an overview of the author's mystical foundations.

A SHORT BESTIARY OF LOVE AND MADNESS, POEMS THAT GIVE VOICE

TO THE ANIMAL IN US ALL In verse and in prose, George Looney's fifth book of poetry, A Short Bestiary of Love and Madness, delves into the worlds of birds and mammals, fish and insects, looking for ways to describe and maybe even understand the various madnesses that love brings. In the lives of the beasts we find much hard evidence of loss and despair, but these fables and parables offer, along the way, absolution and, yes, even salvation, of a sort. "George Looney's poetry," novelist and poet Laura Kasischke writes, "resonates at the level of myth and history, evoking a kind of ancient music alongside the details of our contemporary lives the way weather and the human psyche join to make a dream. This is an important and impressive new collection by one of our most interesting poets." The poems in this collection create a realm where myth and history come together to form a natural world imbued with meaning, one that allows for the possibility of finding, carved in rock, "a figure that could be divine" (as one of the poems puts it). In this evocative collection, as "Formed of Burning and Song" puts it, readers will witness a passionate language "etching / the elaborate form of longing in the earth."

The years 1676 and 1774 marked two turning points in the social and legal treatment of madness in England. In 1676, London's Bethlehem Hospital expanded in grand new premises, and in 1774 the Madhouses Act attempted to limit confinement of the insane. This study explores almost a century of the English history of madness through the texts of five poets who were considered mentally troubled according to contemporary standards: James Carkesse, Anne Finch, William Collins, Christopher Smart and William Cowper were hospitalized, sequestered or exiled from society. Their works cope with representations of insanity, medical definitions or practices, imputed illness, and the judging eye of the 'sane other', shedding new light on the dis/continuities in the notion of madness of this period.

Who does not want to love? Love is a poison, but it is worth being weakened by such a venom given that only by loving we can find the cure: life. Love for the other is the ultimate expression of human existence. Therefore, in this work I try to sing love to the maximum degree of my being; Because, on the one hand, it does not only allow me to know the other, but also myself. From there, I can say, that I am. Poetic love is the creation of a singular universe where the beauty is transformed and embodied in the body of the desired subject. Even when we fight for the ideals of justice, dignity, peace, tolerance, etc., it is the love that gives us the impulse to be able to go ahead and do the unimaginable. Do you want to know what it means to love and be loved? Love first, and you will see yourself in the other and with the other. This book is a translation of two of the books of the author written in Spanish: "El Grito de la Locura" and "Amor poetico y una expression gris," to create an English edition.

"When Love comes knocking on your door why on earth or in heaven or anywhere below or above these places would you hesitate?" Welcoming warmly the third book of Sacred Poetry from Jayaji. Exploring the path of the heart and moving in four chapters on love; The call, The response; the blissful madness to the merging and final union. As you dip into these writings of rapture and verses of Divine Love you will find there is no time to pack your bags or put your clothes on, for when Love enters our doors, it may be, that some old concepts and furniture will have to be rearranged.

This stunning bilingual collection contains poems of passion, longing, and wonder by some of the greatest poets ever to write in the Spanish language, including Pablo Neruda, Josefina de la Torre, Gaston Baquero, Luis Cernuda, Jorge Carrera Andrade, Mario Benedetti, Angela Figura Ayamerich, Jose Maria Zonta, and many others. The poems bristle with images of extraordinary power and invention, captured perfectly with the lush darkness and verbal acceleration at the center of the Spanish literary tradition. Carlos Reyes has published seven collections of poems, most recently Pomegranate, Sister of the Heart, and six collections of translations from the Spanish, including the four-volume complete works of Jorge Carrera Andrade and Poemas de la Isla by Josefina de la Torre. He lives in Portland, Oregon, but travels frequently to Ireland, Ecuador, and Spain.

In 1992, Rahla Xenopoulos was diagnosed with bipolar disorder. Despite the devastating diagnosis, she sought education on her affliction. Although she found an abundance of literature on various mental illnesses, none of it seemed applicable to her. This situation inspired her to write a book chronicling her ongoing efforts to come to terms with a disease that is, in effect, a life sentence. The book recounts her upbringing in an eccentric, loving Jewish family, her struggle with bulimia, anorexia and self-mutilation, her attempts at suicide, finding true love and, finally, the 'crazy, utterly unpredictable experience of giving birth to triplets'. This is neither a self-help book nor a medical guide. Reading this book will not cure anyone; bipolar disorder is a chronic illness. But it did help Rahla - as it will countless others - 'to understand the rhythm in the cacophony of this condition'.

With grand and intricate verse, poet Jace Paul probes the cosmos for truth. Empathetic emotion and a profound yearning for happiness infuse his words with unabashed honesty and witty irreverence, even as he aims his pen at an eclectic spectrum of themes. From the mundane to the sublime, covering subjects such as online gaming, Twitter, mental illness, cosmology, and theology, Paul "writes for the other side." Through words crafted with the aching sadness of a depressive and the mirth of a satirist, he invites his readers to consider our collective heartbreak - and how we might find discover a new hope together.

The most burning love poems of Bedrettin Simsek are combined with his novel, a masterpiece of irony and dark humor! Bedrettin Simsek, the heterodox author of Turkish literature, whose first work 'The Sermon Book Of The False Prophet' came out in 1996, combines his identity as a poet with his identity as a novelist in his book 'Is Love a Madness?' in which he addresses an even more bizarre situation that arises as a result of a bizarreness of the human soul. By making the poem a part of the novel and

What is 'creativity'? And what is 'madness'? How far can we interpret an artist's work through our knowledge of his or her mental state, and how far can we infer a mental state from a work of art? When does a work of art cease to be a personal statement by the artist and become a matter of public concern? The contributions to this book attempt to answer some of these questions. They come from a wide range of disciplines and experiences – a practising psychiatrist, a practising artist suffering from reactive depression, and critics working in literature, film, music and the visual arts. The essays include discussions of the 'myth of creativity', the music of Robert Schumann, the borders of sanity in the writing of Lawrence Durrell, the 'insane truth' of Virginia Woolf, the meeting of doctor and patient in the poetry of Anne Sexton, mood disorders in the fiction of David Foster Wallace, love and madness in the poetry of Hafiz of Shiraz, and the paintings of Adolf Wölfli. Central to this discussion of creativity, madness and civilisation is the difficulty of establishing an appropriate and effective vocabulary and mindset between critics and clinical psychiatrists, which would enable them to work together in understanding mental disturbance in creative artists.

A patient jumps out of her psychoanalyst's window, crashes to the ground and dies. Was it suicide? Or did the psychoanalyst, at her wit's end, push the patient to her death? Tria is a beautiful, successful psychoanalyst in the upper east side of Manhattan, an expert in mother daughter relationships, who often evaluates cases before trial. Yet nothing ever prepared her for her latest patient: Andromeda, a schizophrenic, 400 pound woman accused of murdering her mother. Andromeda hates all women, and the moment she arrives at Tria's office for evaluation, the war is on. As Andromeda's Hannibal-esque mind games proceed, Tria becomes lost deeper in a maze of lies, deception and confusion. As she grapples with Andromeda and her insane demands, Tria begins to lose her grip on reality. Finally, she decides she must take drastic action to save both of them. Beautifully crafted, taut, riveting, A CONSPIRACY OF FRIENDSHIP brings us deeply into the subculture of psychoanalysts and their patients, showing that all is not as well as it seems. It's a page-turning psychological thriller, set behind the mirrored glass and doormen buildings of New York city.

Common Blessings, combines musings on nature, family, tragedy, and romance in a luminous collection of poems celebrating the sacredness of life...THE BOOK OF MADNESS AND LOVE is a powerful, moving, brilliant book -- Maria Mazziotti Gillan.

The book is composed of a series of poems written primarily over the last ten years. They deal with love, death, mental illness, human weakness, human strength, art, and how the poet perceives his life, the world, and the lives of others. The poems are rich in their imagery. Their tone is often tense and edgy.

This is a painful book that contains my most tormented and eternal passion. It is a book written with love, and despite the gloom of some poems, is present in it the pleasure of a true love. Poetry by the author of The 13th Boy, many of which were written while he was a student at Horace Mann preparatory school.

Intense poetry concerning the themes of madness, romance, and history.

This original and highly readable study challenges previous assumptions about the relationship between medicine and the novel. A major addition to nineteenth-century studies, it will be of interest to students and scholars of literature, feminism, social history, and the history of medicine.

A collection of 44 poems written by the author during 1983-1987.

Have you ever felt like being in love was making you go crazy? Ever felt like you were actually going through temporary insanity? Well these poems are guaranteed to take you on an emotional roller coaster, and have you ask the question, "Is madness really love? Or vice versa?" When the Definition of Madness is Love is a collection of innovative poetry that is heartfelt and inspirational. This book will channel emotions in which the reader never knew they embodied, and give them new outlooks on love and life. A must-read for both generations past and present!

Escaping the Darkness: Running from my dreams is a collection of poems that crosses over the lines and the boundaries between love, death, inspiration, and madness. Combining traditional poetry with increasingly popular new-age topics and styles, Escaping the Darkness: Running from my dreams is more than just an average volume of poetry. Instead, it allows the reader to immerse himself/herself within the raw emotions of each poem. As a result, they will both enjoy and dread the journey. Love Here one can find the stories of true romance and devotion: the love of nature, children, husbands, and wives. Be cautious, though. Not all love stories come with "The Happily Ever After" ending. Death Death wears many different masks. Death may cross lines to become blessings. Death isn't always sad and tearful. Death can also be a joyful journey to other levels of awareness. Inspiration Not all inspirational poetry is devoted exclusively to religious beliefs. Inspiration can be found in all aspects of life and death. Here the readers can explore and reflect on what brings them inner joy and peace. Madness Madness is the final point between all the lines. Madness crosses over and often controls love and death. Madness can drive people to do things they wouldn't normally do. These poems allow the reader to decide for themselves
