I thought I'd loved and lost. But the man of my dreams is back into my life. He's not just a billionaire. He's also the hottest man I've ever laid my eyes on. It didn't work out the first time around. My life was in shambles. And circumstances tore us apart. Landon sent me letters even after we'd broken up. Today, he's as tempting as he used to be back then. Those deep, intrusive eyes. That ever-so-charming smile. And the same ambition to conquer the world. I think I might fall in love with him all over again. But something tells me that I'm setting myself up for disaster. I'd be devastated if my heart broke again. So, is it better to let the past stay in the past?

A book of inspirational quotations, Nothing Is Worth More Than This Day presents hundreds of reminders from some of the smartest people who ever lived—from Dr. Seuss to Erma Bombeck, Thich Nhat Hanh to Lena Dunham—that happiness is everywhere and the glass is half-full. times.

They present the big story in such a way that it will; (1) Connect the dots for readers of the Bible, demonstrating how each individual story is really one chapter in the larger story; (2) Show how Jesus is the point to the story, especially his death and resurrection; and (3) Build a biblical world view by showing how the Bible answers the ultimate questions of life.²

Miss Addy didn't think the career choice she made for herself was her true calling. She wasn't completely happy and didn't know why. There has to be something else out there for her. So with no destination in mind, she left it up to God for guidance, and she left her old life behind. Friends and family thought she had totally lost her mind just to leave the way she did. She kind of thought that herself. But something, somewhere, was telling her to leave. She packed up her life and headed out. She stopped off at a small town down the road a couple of days away. Just a stopover, she said to herself. She stayed at a small mom-and-pop motel and seemed to make a couple of instant friends. By touring the town and surrounding vicinity, Addy decided to stay for a couple more days. Before she even realized it, she had a job at a small cafe in town. It just seemed right to be what she truly was to do, a waitress of all things. By doing this, she met even more close friends, who warmed up and welcomed her. Everything was falling into place and her experiences in this town made up her mind, This is where I will call home. Addy knew with all her heart that God did bring her here for a reason. Now only he knows how her adventure will begin and end. A fascinating little story for every day of the year! Read about all kinds of animals - lions, horses, jackals, bears, monkeys, rabbits and even tiny honey bees and ants. These delightful tales of animals and their friends make for an enjoyable story reading session different. The Catherine Ross was running with full sail aloft, filled by a strong gale, and Captain Stuart was making good use of the wind while it lasted. Thus far, the passengers had been spared the usual scourge of new seafarers; seasickness. However, on the fifth day, it caught up with Reverend Wolde. The cook took charge, fed him special food, and said it would run its course in a day or so. However, Nathan was not reassured, and felt certain he would be buried at sea. Two days later, he made it out on deck with his wife and was enjoying the fresh air, when a call came from the Crows Nest, Ship Ahoy. Well now, this was something new, and they quickly scanned the horizon. But there was nothing there to see. A crew member, who saw them looking, walked over and said nothing would be visible from deck level until late the next day. That evening, Ian said it might be the MacTavish clipper, Anne Ross, bound for Newfoundland, but they would have to wait until the two ships got closer to be sure. Nathan and Mary Catherine were sitting underneath their hammocks discussing the events of the day. Nathan, dont you think its a bit odd for two ships to meet in the middle of the ocean like this? I doubt the Captains just want to say howdy to each other; I believe theres more to it. Well, my dear, Nathan replied, I know you pretty well. Youre not thinking its some sort of conspiracy, so it must be one of your premonitions. All right, Mary Catherine, lets hear it. Its the weather, Nathan. The other Captain is going to warn us were sailing into a storm. The carriages stopped on top of a hill overlooking the Firth of Tay, and the family got out to look. Directly opposite them, atop a high bluff, was The Barony. Mary Catherine gasped. Oh my God, Nathan, surely that cant be where were going, can it. I believe thats got to be your fathers place, my dear. Youre almost home now. She grabbed the front of his coat with both hands and shook him. Reverend Wolde, that is not my home! My home is across that ocean in the mountains of Virginia, where I live happily with my family. Look at me, Nathan; help me. I cant do this alone. She believed him to be sleeping in his chair, but the Baron, heard the door close and stood on trembling leg. Father, was all she got out before the tears came, and she was folded into his arms. My beautiful daughter, how lovely you are. If only your mother could see you now, he sobbed.
