Excerpt from Transactions of the Twenty-Third Session of the American Institute of Homeopathy: Held in Chicago, June 7, 8, 9, and 10, 1870 In presenting this volume of Transactions, the Secretary deems it his duty to call the attention of the Institute to the importance of immediate reform in the manner of contributing papers designed for publication. Such papers ought to be furnished in a completed condition during the annual sessions of the Institute, instead of being announced, withdrawn for revision, and then transmitted to the Secretary some time during the ensuing year. One important paper has been lost during the past year in course of transmission; others have reached the Secretary too late for publication in their proper order; while still others have not been furnished at all. Many arrived so late in the year that portions of this volume had to be forced through the press at the rate of fifty pages daily - a speed hardly compatible with editorial accuracy. If the various Bureaus were to report none but completed papers, and to present those during the session, these difficulties would not be encountered, and the volume could be ready for delivery several months sooner. Excerpt from The Journal of the American Institute of Homeopathy, Vol. 6: May, 1914 It is a saturated solution of boric acid, reinforced by the antiseptic properties of ozoniferous oils. After the volatile constituents have evaporated, a film of boric acid remains evenly distributed upon the surfaces to which Listerine has been applied. There is no possibility of poisonous effect through the absorption of Listerine. Listerine is unirritating, even when applied to the most delicate tissues; in its full strength it does not coagulate serous albumen. For those purposes wherein a poisonous or corrosive disinfectant can not be safely employed, Listerine is the most acceptable antiseptic for a physician's prescription. The American Institute of Homeopathy (AIH) is the oldest medical organization in the United States, founded three years before the American Medical Association. The American Institute of Homeopathy Handbook for Parents is the first AIH publication that offers another option for parents who are reluctant to participate in the widespread extreme measures of conventional medicine such as stimulants, antidepressants, and overuse of antibiotics. Step-by-step Edward Shalts, a medical doctor who practices homeopathic medicine, explains what homeopathy is and how it works. He presents a user-friendly overview of acute and chronic issues and shows how parents can deal with them, either on their own for some problems, or in many cases, with a qualified practitioner. This important resource explains the principles of homeopathy, the nature of remedies, and the appropriate time to use homeopathy.

Excerpt from Transactions of the Fifty-Fourth Session of the American Institute of Homeopathy: Held at Omaha, Neb., June 23, 1898 Owing to the plan of work pursued by most of the Sections at Omaha, and which seemed to be very successful and satisfactory, the actual number of papers presented to the Institute was largely reduced. The discussions, although in some cases more than usually full, do not materially increase the number of pages. Should this decrease in the quantity of manuscript presented continue another year it will be possible to again lead all the pages in the transactions and insert in the next volume some matter heretofore unavoidably omitted.
