Shortly before her death, Mother Louise Margaret Claret de la Touche (1868-1915) was commissioned by her bishop to write "The Book of Infinite Love". Aimed at all Catholics, it is an effort to expound upon the nature and bounties of God's love for men, but more particularly, it shows how God's love is meant to be manifested throughout the world by the overflowing of Christ's love in His priests. Those who read these pages will marvel that they were composed by an uneducated and unlettered woman. Those who knew her personally concluded that this book was written with divine assistance. Infinite Love! It is the substance of Catholic doctrine, it is its center; it is the explanation of all the mysteries of our Faith. It is not only the love of God for the creature, it is God Himself. "His voice, Dilly, it was... growly. Like real growly. It got me tingling." Life for curvy, witty, just-fine-by-herself-thank-you-very-much Delilah Coltrane has fallen into a slightly boring, but comfortable routine. She runs stadium stairs, she drinks a little too much and is a karaoke master. But for Dilly, a reluctant ice sculptor, the routine is starting to turn into a rut. Jake Somerset is a man caught between two worlds. When his father died, he inherited both his spot as head of a massively successful tech company... and as the alpha of a pack of rowdy, half-crazed werewolves. Jake figures the best way to say "I'm The Boss" is to get a giant statue made of himself. He walks into Delilah's studio, and straight into her heart. The big, growly, adorably cocky billionaire is exactly what Dilly never knew she wanted, until he walked through her door with his dark curls, steely silver eyes, and shoulders broad enough to stop her dead in her tracks. And yeah, his voice is growly enough to get her tingling in all the right places. While the two indulge in a whirlwind romance, a threat brews on the fringes. Jake's brother – the exiled alpha-wannabe Dane – wants to take back the pack. Once he finds out about Delilah, Dane won't stop with controlling the pack... he's gunning for his brother's mate. Will the unlikely pair survive a war with the brutal and murderous rogue wolf? Or will their match made in heaven turn into a match made in hell?

In this novel, the main character/narrator is used as a vehicle to make sense of the atrocities in the former Yugoslavia.

the nameless strangers around her. It doesn't take long for the beachgoers to start doing more than look... If you're into steamy short stories with hot alpha males, then these six unapologetically sexy stories are perfect for you. Step right in... ~~~~~ Excerpt ~~~~~ Excerpt: The Duke of Wicked He stood up slowly, like a tiger who's decided that he wasn't going to pounce but take his sweet time approaching a prey that he knew would have no possibility of escaping. When he walked to stand by me, I leaned away, hoping that he would not be able to sense the change in my body chemistry. There was a tightness between my legs that was completely and utterly unfamiliar to me. He twisted my chair around so I was facing him, then boxed me in with both hands on either side of me. Objection hung on the edge of my lips, but I couldn't get a single word out. He leaned towards me, his body heat radiating to warm me. The heated closeness took what little air there was between us and it was almost impossible to breathe. "Yes, or no?" he asked, leaning down until his face was level with mine. I was certain he could see the fear and confusion in my eyes. Then, he laid a chaste kiss on the corner of my mouth. I inhaled sharply, but didn't move away. He smelled like cinnamon and honey. I leaned in without thinking. The softness of his lips surprised me. His hand went to my left breast where he thumbed my hardening nipple through layers of clothing. He sucked my lower lip into his mouth and I gasped at the sharp pain of his fingers pinching down on my nipple. When we parted for air, he was grinning a feral grin that made the throbbing between my legs intensify. "Is that a yes, Elizabeth? I want to hear you say it." He looked at me demanding, with an unspoken hunger. An unintelligible murmur left my lips. I don't know what I wanted. He looked so intense, so handsome. It would be a blessing to have someone like him love me. Someone who obviously knew what he was doing. "Say it." He kissed me again, a deep, rough kiss that left my mouth and mind numb and tingling. His fingers ripped my clothes open, exposing my naked breast to him. He buried his head to my neck, kissing a trail of fire down my cleavage and towards my ample breast. "Yes, or no?" he repeated, his breath burning a mark on my skin, inches from my nipple. There was only one thing I could say. "Yes." ~~~~~ PG Excerpt ~~~~~ Excerpt: The Duke of Wicked "You were very unkind towards Mr. Gautier," I gasped as soon as I was certain he was out of earshot. "As I should be!" she countered, fanning herself with her red and black oriental fan that her father had acquired for her earlier that week. The little paper decoration cost a small fortune, but she was fast wrinkling and tearing it already. I tried not to flinch when she whipped it shut in one smooth motion that no doubt shortened its already short life. She huffed, being her usual over-dramatic self, then glared at me as she waited for me to respond. "You shouldn't be associated with the likes of him!" she said in a quick, angry burst when I said nothing. I smiled weakly, knowing she was just bursting to share her gossip about the kind gentleman. "What has he ever done to incur your wrath, my dear Josephine?" I asked. She gasped, feigning surprise at my lack of knowledge, then proceeded to flip open the folded paper fan and wave it at herself even harder, pushing hair out of her slightly chubby face. I couldn't help but giggle at her reaction. "Don't you know who he is?!" she asked, looking so incensed that I started to wonder if he was some sort of con man and I had just agreed to give up all my family heirloom to him. I shook my head and ignored her when she glanced around surreptitiously to ensure that there was no one around us to eavesdrop. There was nobody around us at all, not after she had been so rude to Mr. Gautier and basically shooed him out of the cafe. In a hushed whisper, she said, "He's the Duke of Wicked!" I stared at her for a moment, then burst out laughing. "The duke of what now?" I said between giggles, certain that she was making things up to make our mundane morning more interesting. "What an entirely ridiculous name!" I said. "Wicked is not a district that I know of, Josephine. In fact, I'm fairly certain there's no such district!" She puffed indignantly and said, "I didn't come up with that name." "What has he done to deserve such an awful name?" I asked, a hint of mirth wrinkling the corner of my eyes. She smirked, pride filling her at the thought that she knew more than me. I didn't mind that in the least. She prided herself in knowing just about everything in town. For example, she had known about the gender of the neighbors newborn twins (a boy and a girl) even before it was announced, whereas I hadn't even known that Anna was pregnant. "Wait, don't tell me," I interrupted before she could say a word. "The duke of wicked..." I murmured contemplatively. "The 'duke' part is quite self-explanatory. He's a duke who's done something wicked..." I stared at her face for some sort of clue. When there was

Blood rushed to my cheeks and I lowered my lashes over my eyes even though I knew he couldn't see me. When I was able to look up again, my gaze went everywhere but the six foot tall, blue-eyed Greek-god just a few steps away. Instead, I stared at the massive room around me, beautiful paintings adorning the ivory walls. A massive bed was behind me, but I couldn't see it. My arms were hung above my head, heavy and aching ever so slightly. My toes barely touched the ground. It was hard to move, let alone turn around to survey my surrounding. The thing I was wearing was a cardboard masquerade mask to shield my eyes. He was wearing the same mask, but he was still in full suit. I had expected him to be naked. When Tom asked if I was ready, I told him I was with certainty. But now that I was here, helpless with a man whose name I didn't even know, I wasn't so certain. This would be the first time I had ever done anything close to... whatever this was. Sex. That was it. Pure, unadulterated carnal pleasures. "I've never done this before," I murmured, my voice barely above a whimper. I was frightened, but also incredibly aroused. It was hard not to be. The man in front of me was ridiculously good looking. His eyes were an intense shade of green that seemed to look inside me, awakening a desire that hid beneath the frightened nerves. I shuddered as he circled me, drinking in the sight of my naked body with his eyes, so intense, so unfamiliar. When he spoke, his voice was so deep and rough that it vibrated through my body like an electric current passing through my bones. "I'm a virgin," I said, louder, since I wasn't certain if he heard me the first time. "I know." He closed in on me like a panther approaching a prey that had no way of getting away. When he finally touched me, I gasped. "Your fingers are cold," I whimpered. "Sorry," he said, not sounding sorry at all. His fingers grazed across my bare shoulders, leaving goosebumps in his wake. He danced his fingers over my shoulder blades and I trembled under his touch. "Do you want me to continue?" he asked, almost careful, as if worried I would say no. It was tempting, but I nodded tentatively. "Yes. Please continue, sir."

This volume offers film enthusiasts and teachers an investigation into what film critics do and examines what ideologies inform their evaluations. By employing recent television programs and films and comparing them to older ones, the study is able to trace changes in the methodologies of film and media critics. The work argues for the emergence of neofuturism as a chosen method of interpretation, contrasting with the dominance of postmodernism as the evaluative method through the early years of the new millennium. It also asks the questions who evaluates film and why? In doing so, the study questions the criteria for film evaluation, the validity of some reviews, and asks the question whether the evaluative system needs to change altogether.
