The last tree that survived because of its smallness is also the first tree that is reminiscent of the beauty of nature. Once upon a time, a group of friends were looking for suitable place to live. They settled in an unspoiled forest, where the sun sifted through the leaves and there was a gentle breeze. But it didn't take long before they started cutting down trees and making fires to build homes. They kept cutting down trees, and it seemed that the more they cut down, the more demand there was.
