Why Simple Wins Escape the Complexity Trap and Get to Work That Matters Bibliomotion

Parental alienation arising from disputed hearings in family-court is a devastating problem affecting millions of families around the world. Much as we addressed domestic violence several decades ago, we treat parental alienation as a domestic issue rather than what it is; a crisis affecting communities, school systems, police and court systems, mental-health and financial institutions, and crucially, legislative bodies. Our social, cultural and legal systems sanction and even promote parental alienation at the expense of our children's wellbeing by rewarding lawyers for increasing parental animosity. Malicious Mother syndrome is now a recognized condition, causing child abuse, often at a developmental stage that will leave a lifelong mark on the child of a disputed family-law judgment. This calamitous situation grows progressively worse while legislation exists to encourage and incentivize members of family-law to profit from the easy money family-court offers avaricious, amoral members of family-law to litigate. Undoubtedly financially motivated litigation is never in the child's best interests and always benefits the family-law members, yet no checks and boundaries exist to prevent the abuse of children by inappropriately qualified 'judges' being played by greed motivated lawyers, almost always reflecting gender prejudice in the process.
