This volume offers a new translation of Kant's pioneering contribution to the discipline of anthropology.

Frozen in its sinister history, the house nestled on its private road lay waiting for him. Widowed author Rhett Shaw leaves New York in search of solitude within Vermont's countryside where he discovers a decayed and forgotten home that looks like the perfect fixer-upper. While renovating, Rhett notices peculiarities: appliances turn on by themselves, he hears voices in the walls, and he senses a presence watching him.

Despite the phenomena, he becomes obsessed with the restorations, and the more sweat he pours into them, the more he feels the house urging him. As the house takes shape, so does his new book. His characters embed themselves inside his thoughts—and possibly, he wonders, his actions. The felonies he describes in his story are infesting his new community in explicit detail, and the distraught author can't tell if he's depicting the crimes before they're committed or after. Is he psychic, or is the house controlling him? Get lost in this chilling "absolute must-read" that is two books in one and will "keep you on the edge" with its spine-tingling plots. She whispered, "It gets angry, and then it consumes you." Ages 16+

Presents a collection of work in processual archaeology that represents a wide range of research domains, rather than being focused on a specific topic or style of research. The Iron Wolf mercenaries who guard travelers on the Misery Trail are notorious for their quick and casual sex lives. Deryn may fit the stereotype better than most, but she has her reasons. A childhood tragedy has left her wary of forming attachments. If you don't care, then you can't get hurt, but you can still make a mess of things—such as the error of judgment that leaves her with no money, forced to spend the winter on a lousy job in a miserable little backwater. There she meets Alana, local healer, vet, and woman of mystery. It does not take Deryn long to find out that Alana is more than she seems, and has her own perilous secret to keep. Yet Deryn still finds herself falling for the woman, so much so that her come-and-go lifestyle is at risk. This would be bad enough, but serious trouble arrives for Deryn and Alana in the form of demon magic from the Time of Chaos—revealing that old legends are not merely material for ghost stories around the fire. As the danger increases, who do they need to fear more, the living or the dead?
